Statistical View of the British Empire.

We publish below a table which we have compiled from various sources, giving an approximate statistical view of the British Empire. We say approximate view, as there are no means to obtain all these figures with entire accuracy, and under an uniform date.

But the figures we have given of Revenue and Expenditure, Imports and Exports, Public Debt and Tonnage, are all taken from official sources.

The same remark has to be made of the Census Returns, in all cases where the Census has been taken. But the dates vary, and this part of the table contains more of the element of estimate than the others. The figures, however, may be accepted as nearly accurate as can be obtained.

The areas are also necessarily approximate. The general descriptions of climate, govt., &c., may be accepted as correct:
