4.—Islands.

The northern and western coasts of Canada are fringed by islands, while along the eastern coast and in the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence river a smaller number of important islands are found. Those on the north are mostly within the Arctic circle, but include several situated as far south as James bay; they are included in the provisional districts of Franklin and Keewatin. Baffin, Victoria and Ellesmere are the largest of the northern islands, with areas estimated at 211,000, 74,000 and 76,600 square miles respectively. On the Pacific coast,
