

group, as compared with 12.0 p.c. in Ontario, the second province in this comparison; the disproportion is probably due to the employment of male Orientals in domestic service in British Columbia. Following Ontario come Manitoba with 11.4, Quebec with 11.1, and Alberta with 10.6 p.c. respectively. The proportion is lower in Saskatchewan with 8.2 p.c., and in the three Maritime provinces, with 8.5 p.c. in Nova Scotia, 7.9 p.c. in New Brunswick and 6.1 p.c. in Prince Edward Island. But it is obvious from the figures that the service group is spread out over all the provinces much more evenly than most of the others, because of the direct relationship in which those who render service stand to all other human beings, as distinguished from those whose activities are connected with commodities either in their natural or their manufactured state.
