In 1931, for the first time in the history of the Dominion Census, the religions of the people were cross-classified according to racial origin. The results, for Canada as a whole, are shown in Table 25.

It is seen from the information there given that in Canada the Anglican, the Baptist, the Presbyterian and the United Church of Canada derive the great proportion of their support from the British races. More than 61 p.c. of those of British race are members either of the United Church of Canada or are Anglicans.

The Roman Catholic Church not only derives very strong support from the French Canadians of Quebec province, where 91.42 p.c. of the population are members of that Church, but also from other continental European races. For instance, such important racial elements in the Canadian population as the Ukrainian, the Polish and even the German have nearly 70 p.c., over 85 p.c. and nearly 23 p.c. of their respective populations reported as Roman Catholic, while such lesser elements, as the Austrian, the Hungarian and the Yugoslavic have over 67 p.c., over 72 p.c. and 76 p.c., respectively, members of the same religion. The Russian element, which ranks between these two groups in numbers, has over 28 p.c. of its people Roman Catholic.

Among the Protestant denominations of the continental European races, the Lutheran ranks very high among the German, the Norwegian, the Swedish and the Finnish elements.
