Rural and Urban Farm Populations.—Of the 10,362,833 people who formed, in 1931, the population of the nine provinces of Canada, exclusive of the Territories, only 3,289,507 or 31·7 p.c. lived on farms.

There were 728,623 farms within the nine provinces, and, considering the 14,056 farms (see Table 21) which were located within the limits of incorporated cities, towns or villages as "urban", the farm population was classified as 3,223,422 living on rural farms and 65,718 on urban farms. More than one-half (50·8 p.c.) of the people on urban farms were in Quebec and only 23·5 p.c. in Ontario. Alberta ranks third with 6·4 p.c. and Nova Scotia fourth with 5·7 p.c. This was in contrast with the distribution on rural farms where 24·4 p.c. were in Ontario, 23·1 in Quebec, 17·4 in Saskatchewan and 11·5 in Alberta; these four provinces, therefore, had 76·4 p.c. of the rural farm population. The rural and urban farm populations bore a very close relationship to the number of farms of each class in the individual provinces, but the distribution of rural farms followed more closely the distribution of total population (see Table 1) than that of urban farms. Among the provinces, Quebec had the greatest number of persons per farm on farms of both the rural and urban classes.

Table 21 gives the number of farms and the farm populations, urban and rural, by provinces, as recorded at the Census of 1931.
