

CHAPTER XXVII.—JUDICIAL AND PENITENTIARY STATISTICS.*

Canadian Criminal Law and Procedure.—An account of the development of the Criminal Code in Canada was given at pp. 1085-1087 of the 1934-35 edition of the Year Book. In this article a résumé of procedure and of the extent and jurisdiction of the various classes of judges and magistrates was given.

The statistics presented in the tables that follow, which are summarized from the Annual Report of Statistics of Criminal and Other Offences, are collected directly from the criminal courts in the different judicial districts throughout the Dominion. There are 155 judicial districts, including 2 sub-districts, divided as to provinces as follows: Prince Edward Island 3, Nova Scotia 18, New Brunswick 15, Quebec 24, Ontario 47, Manitoba 6, Saskatchewan 21, Alberta 12, British Columbia 8, and Yukon 1. The figures for the Northwest Territories are obtained from the reports of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Section 1.—General Tables.

The collection and publication of criminal statistics now made by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics was initiated in 1876 (39 Vict., c. 13). All records of crime in that period are now available in publications of the Judicial Statistics Branch of the Bureau. The statistics relate to years ended Sept. 30, the latest report being for 1936. Beginning with the report for 1922, an enlargement of the classification of offences has been adopted, by which offences of juvenile offenders are compiled separately from those of adults.

Crime is divided into two definite classes, 'criminal' or 'indictable offences', which include all serious crime covered by the Criminal Code (see Section 2, p. 1022), and 'summary' or 'non-indictable offences', which comprise breaches of municipal by-laws, traffic laws, and other less serious crimes (see Section 3, p. 1027). Broadly speaking, indictable offences are triable by jury, although in certain cases the accused is accorded the right of election as to whether he be tried by jury or before a judge without the intervention of a jury, and in other cases the jurisdiction of the magistrate as to trial is absolute and does not depend upon the consent of the accused. Non-indictable offences are usually dealt with summarily by police magistrates under the Summary Convictions Act, and comprise breaches of municipal regulations and other minor offences. The term indictable applies to offences of adults only, similar offences committed by juveniles being termed 'major' offences; similarly, non-indictable offences of adults are termed 'minor' offences when attributed to juveniles. Returns of criminal court proceedings for the year ended Sept. 30, 1936, showed that 420,247 trials were held as compared with 402,148 during the previous year. The figures showed 42,541 indictable and 377,706 non-indictable cases, as compared with 39,506 indictable and 362,642 non-indictable cases during the previous year. Of the indictable offences, 36,059 were convictions as compared with 33,531 during 1935. The 36,059 convictions during 1936 were comprised of 32,689 males and 3,370 females. In 1935, 30,195 males and 3,336 females were convicted.

Previous to 1922, however, the classification into criminal and minor offences was followed in classifying statistics; the historical Table 1 and the more detailed
