Figures for the First World War showed that only 13 p.c. had high or technical school training and only 1.5 p.c. had attended university.

Service personnel in a number of cases, through the establishment of Directorates of Education in each of the Armed Services, are fitting themselves for their education while actually in the Service. These facilities for in-Service education are being carried on under a program devised by the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League.

The opportunity for university training is governed by length of service and scholarship. For instance, Service personnel who have served at least two years and who have completed the entrance requirements to the particular university they wish to attend, or who can obtain such admission within fifteen months after discharge, may be assisted for three academic years in university and, if the university career shows promise, they can be carried through to graduation. Where special scholarship is demonstrated, the ex-serviceman may be assisted to a post-graduate degree. In addition to the maintenance grant of $10.20 per week, if single, and $14.40 per week, if married, provided by P.C. 7633, tuition, student and athletic fees may be paid. The one restriction is that Service personnel cannot repeat a year's work for which benefits have already been paid, nor can they exhaust benefits in university and then expect to receive vocational training.

This post-discharge training program is now in effect. Seventy-four ex-servicemen and women discharged from the Armed Forces in the present war are attending Canadian universities during the present session. Table 6 shows the universities they are attending and the courses they are taking.
