Offences Against the Liquor Acts.—Until the War of 1914-18, alcoholic liquors were generally sold under specified conditions by licensed hotels or licensed shops. Offences against the liquor Acts usually represented a breach of the conditions of sale. During the War, prohibition was generally established but in more recent years the Provincial Governments have taken over the sale of liquor through commissions. Eight of the nine provinces now have such liquor commissions, Prince Edward Island being the only province in which prohibition prevails. In 1929, the number of convictions for offences against the liquor Acts reached the highest figure on record, viz., 19,327; convictions in 1943 numbered 15,099.

Breaches of Traffic Regulations.—Convictions for breaches of traffic regulations which at the beginning of the century numbered only 185 in all Canada, have, as a result of the growing density and increasing use of motor-vehicles, become the largest element in the non-indictable offences. Such convictions showed an increase of 36 p.c. from 1939 to 1942, mainly due to the application of the 40 miles an hour speed law throughout Canada, and in the later year represented $68 \cdot 8$ p.c. of the total non-indictable convictions. In 1943, however, the reduction in the use of motor-vehicles resulted in a decrease in convictions, bringing them back to below the level of 1937 and 1938. Such convictions in 1943 represented $59 \cdot 0$ p.c. of the total for non-indictable offences.
