The chief source of information on the current state of the country is the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, organized as the central statistical bureau for Canada, and described in Section 1. Section 2 contains a list of the Acts of Parliament administered by the several Departments of the Dominion Government, and Section 3 a bibliography of the publications of these Departments. This is followed, in Section 4, by a bibliography of the publications of Provincial Governments and, in Section 5, by a list of Royal Commissions appointed by the Dominion or the provinces as well as British Royal Commissions concerned with Canada.

Canadian Information Service.—The Canadian Information Service was established on Sept. 28, 1945, by Order in Council, P.C. 6300, to "provide means and facilities for distributing abroad, information concerning Canada, and for coordinating and assisting the public information services of the Government".

The Service is under the supervision of a committee representative of members appointed by the President of the Privy Council; the Secretary of State for External Affairs; the Department of Trade and Commerce; the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation; the Government Film Commissioner; and the Information Service. The Committee reports to the Cabinet through the Honourable Brooke Claxton, the Minister responsible for the Service.

The Canadian Information Service collects information in many forms and supplies Canadian representatives abroad with up-to-date information about Canadian events, libraries of Canadian books, photographs, etc., background material on happenings in Canada, and also prepares material for direct distribution abroad by Canadian representatives through diplomatic missions or Trade Commissioner's Offices. The Service maintains offices at New York, London, Washington, Paris and Canberra. These offices, which work very closely with Canadian diplomatic representatives in the areas concerned, act as distribution points for Canadian information.

Journalists and information people from other countries are encouraged to come to Canada and, schools and universities abroad are provided with information about Canada for use in their curricula.

Canadian Information Service provides information officers to assist the Canadian delegations to international conferences. It has also assisted in setting up press arrangements for those international organizations that have held meetings in Canada during the past few years.
