Alcoholic liquors were generally sold under specified conditions by licensed hotels or licensed shops until the First World War. During that War prohibition was established generally but, in more recent years, the Provincial Governments have taken over the sale of liquors through liquor commissions. Prince Edward Island was the last of the provinces to give up prohibition on July 6, 1948.

Breaches of Traffic Regulations.—At the beginning of the present century, when the motor-car was scarcely known and to-day's speeds even for freight movement were unheard of, convictions for breaches of traffic regulations numbered only 185 for all Canada. A strong influence in reducing convictions under breaches of traffic regulations in 1943, 1944 and 1945 was the removal, owing to wartime restrictions, of a large number of private and passenger vehicles from the highways. The lifting of these restrictions resulted in a record number of convictions in 1946 and again in 1947. Such convictions accounted for 71.4 p.c. of all non-indictable offences in the latter year.
