NOTE.—The interpretation of the symbols used in the tables throughout the Year Book will be found facing p. 1 of this volume. Appointments made after this Chapter went to press are given in the Annual Register at the end of this volume.

The government of Canada is provided for by the British North America Act (30-31 Vict., c. 3) of 1867.* This Statute of the United Kingdom Parliament, as from time to time amended, forms the written basis of the constitution of Canada. Subsequent sections of this Chapter describe the institutions, as at present constituted, by which Canada is governed.

The several stages in the development of the status of Canada have been authoritatively described in the reports of successive Imperial Conferences including that held at London in 1926, which defined the group of self-governing communities consisting of the United Kingdom and the Dominions as "autonomous communities within the British Empire, equal in status, in no way subordinate one to another in any aspect of their domestic or external affairs, though united by a common allegiance to the Crown, and freely associated as members of the British Commonwealth of Nations". That Conference also recognized that, as a consequence of this equality of status, the Governor General of a Dominion "is the representative of the Crown, holding in all essential respects the same position in relation to the administration of public affairs in the Dominion as is held by His Majesty the King in Great Britain", and that "it is the right of the Government of each Dominion to advise the Crown in all matters relating to its own affairs". Simultaneously, with this change in the constitutional relationship between the several parts of the British Commonwealth of Nations, there developed, as a complementary aspect of nationhood, the assumption by the several Dominions of further responsibilities and rights of sovereign States in their relations with other members of the community of
