

Various modifications in tariff rates have been made under special trade arrangements, but the British Preferential rates, which are applicable to numerous types of goods from many parts of the Commonwealth, are always the most favourable. In return for this special treatment, Canadian goods enjoy similar tariff advantages in many Commonwealth countries.

Tariff Arrangements in Force as of Nov. 30, 1952.—In the following list, contracting countries under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (G.A.T.T.) are indicated. In the case of a number of countries belonging to G.A.T.T., other trade arrangements with Canada remain in force and the terms of these are given in the statement.
