Section 2.—International Activities*

Subsection 1.—Canada and Commonwealth Relations 1955-57

Close and friendly consultation, long the symbol of Commonwealth association, continued during the period under review, June 1, 1955 to Apr. 30, 1957. Though 1956 was in certain respects a critical year, the differences of policy revealed over the Suez issue between the United Kingdom and certain of its Commonwealth colleagues were followed by a very real desire to remove the causes of these differences. Canada and the United Kingdom worked closely together throughout the year and, in unspectacular but vital day-to-day relations, continued that frank and friendly consultation which is the life blood of the Commonwealth connection. Not only at the Prime Ministers' Meeting, but in the United Nations, in Colombo Plan matters, at NATO conferences, and in such official
