

federal personal income tax otherwise payable on income of a resident of a province and on income earned in a province is reduced by 17 p.c. This abatement will increase by one percentage point a year until it becomes 20 p.c. in 1966.

To a very large extent, individual income tax is payable as the income is earned. Taxpayers in receipt of salary or wages have tax deducted from their pay by their employer and in this way pay nearly 100 p.c. of their tax liability during the calendar year. The balance of the tax, if any, is payable at the time of filing the tax return before Apr. 30 in the following year. People with more than 25 p.c. of their income from sources other than salary or wages must pay tax by quarterly instalments throughout the year. Here again returns must be filed before Apr. 30 in the following calendar year.

The following statement shows what taxpayers pay at various levels of income. In calculating these taxes it has been assumed that all taxpayers take the standard deduction of $100. No allowance has been made for the 20-p.c. dividend tax credit. In calculating the taxes shown for a married taxpayer with two children eligible for family allowances, a deduction of $300 has been allowed for each child.

The income taxes shown above are abated by 17 p.c. in all provinces. In all provinces except Quebec, Manitoba and Saskatchewan the provincial tax is the same as the federal abatement. Therefore in these provinces the taxes shown above are the combined federal and provincial taxes. In Quebec the provincial tax does not coincide with the federal abatement. In Manitoba and Saskatchewan the provincial tax exceeds the abatement by 6 p.c.

It was announced in the 1963 Budget Speech that taxpayers who establish a manufacturing or processing business in a designated area of slower growth during a two-year period commencing from the date of enactment of the 1963 Income Tax Act Amending Bill would be eligible for a three-year exemption from income tax. As of July 1963, this proposed change had not been brought into force by legislation nor had any area been designated.

Corporation Income Tax

The Income Tax Act levies a tax upon the income from everywhere in the world of corporations resident in Canada and upon the income attributable to operations in Canada
