Special Libraries.—The latest figures available for special libraries are for 1961. In that year 580 government and private special libraries contained more than 5,600,000 volumes as well as large stocks of pamphlets, periodicals, microcards, microfilms and other material. Most of the special libraries were located in Ontario (250), Quebec (150), and British Columbia (52).

Library Education.—Five Canadian universities give degree courses in library science—McGill, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto and British Columbia. In 1964, there were 290 bachelor of library science graduates, about 70 p.c. of whom were women. Almost 42 p.c. secured positions in university libraries, about 25 p.c. in public libraries, over 7 p.c. in school libraries, and the remainder in special libraries and elsewhere. The median beginning salary of the graduates was $5,247.
