

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT BUILDINGS IN OTTAWA are quite diversified in design. The early, centrally located buildings followed the architecture or a modified version of the architecture of the Parliament Buildings. However, most Departments of Government have been re-housed within the past fifteen years and the new buildings are mainly functional in character. As the city grew in size and traffic became a problem, the centralization of Departments was considered impracticable and the buildings of recent construction are grouped in areas scattered throughout the city and its environs.

Photos by:

Malak, Ottawa (colour)

Department of National Health and Welfare

National Research Council

Department of Agriculture