

The Canadian population, although basically made up of British Isles and French ethnic groups, is a mosaic of people whose forbears or who themselves have come from many lands. More than 42 p.c. of them are under 20 years of age.