PART IV.—FEDERAL AND PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT EMPLOYMENT

Federal Government Employment

The former Civil Service Commission became the Public Service Commission with the proclamation of the Public Service Employment Act on Mar. 13, 1967. Under this Act the Commission retains its status as an independent body responsible to Parliament for the appointment of qualified persons to or from within the public service and for the operation of staff training and development programs. It may establish boards to consider appeals against selections for appointments made from within the public service, to make recommendations on the delegation of its authority, and to inquire into allegations of political partisanship. The Commission's jurisdiction is extended to include a number of persons not covered by the former Civil Service Act. It is also given the prerogative of making extensive delegation of its authority to deputy heads to perform any of its powers, functions or duties, except those relating to appeals.

Under the amended Financial Administration Act and the Public Service Staff Relations Act, both of which were also proclaimed on Mar. 13, 1967, the Treasury Board is made responsible for the development of regulations, policies and standards governing
