¹ Injuries requiring medical treatment but not causing disability for a sufficient period to qualify for compensation; the period varies in the several provinces. ² Includes, except where noted otherwise, payments to compensate loss of earnings, medical aid payments, cost of rehabilitation and hospitalization (not including capital expenditures) and pensions paid (not pensions awarded) for temporary and permanent disabilities. ³ Excludes payments by employers who make direct compensation to their employees; such employees come under Schedule I of the Ontario and Quebec Workmen's Compensation Acts.

Section 7.—Organized Labour in Canada

A special article on the "History of the Labour Movement in Canada", prepared by Dr. Eugene Forsey, Director of Research of the Canadian Labour Congress, appears in the 1967 Canada Year Book at pp. 773-781.

Subsection I.—Union Membership

Union membership in Canada as of Jan. 1, 1967, stood at 1,921,000, continuing the upward trend that has been in evidence since 1962. This figure represented 32.3 p.c. of the non-agricultural paid workers in Canada and 26.1 p.c. of the over-all labour force. The increase in membership between 1966 and 1967 was 185,000 or 10.6 p.c., the major portion of which was attributable to organizing activity of the unions in the favourable environment of an expanding labour force. The 1967 total was also influenced by the addition of 93,000 members of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, which became affiliated with the Canadian Labour Congress on Jan. 1. In the five-year period ended January 1967, union membership in Canada increased by 500,000.
