

outstanding at the time his parole was granted. If a parolee commits an indictable offence, his parole is automatically forfeited and he is returned to the institution to serve the unexpired balance of his sentence plus any new term to which he is sentenced for the commission of the new offence. The district representative may also issue a Warrant of Suspension and have a parolee placed in custody if it is necessary to prevent a breach of any term or condition of the parole. These officers are thus able to exercise effective and adequate control over all parolees in their respective areas.

During the 14 years of its operation, up to December 1972, the Parole Board granted parole (of all types) to 44,471 inmates. During the same period, 6,874 parolees were returned to prison; 2,539 paroles were revoked for misbehaviour or the commission of a minor offence, and 4,335 paroles were forfeited for the commission of an indictable offence. In 1972 the Board granted 4,869 paroles of all types; 442 were revoked and 1,041 forfeited.
