The House of Commons. The BNA Act, 1867 provided that Quebec should have a fixed number of 65 members in the House of Commons and that each of the other provinces should be assigned such a number of members as would bear the same proportion to the number of its population as the number 65 bore to the number of the population of Quebec. This Act also provided that on completion of a Census in 1871 and after each subsequent decennial census the representation of the provinces would be readjusted, provided that the proportionate representation of the provinces fixed by the Act remained undisturbed.

In 1946 the House of Commons adopted a resolution stating that the effect of the provisions of the BNA Act relating to representation had not been satisfactory in that proportionate representation of the provinces according to population had not been maintained and that a more equitable apportionment of members to the various provinces
