It will be seen that while there was a decrease on the total business of the year of $1,184,131, there was an increase in that of Canadian Companies of $388,365; a very small decrease in that of British Companies, and the business of American Companies fell off over a million and a half, or more than 18½ per cent. The general decrease is much less than in the preceding year. For the first time since 1869, the amount of insurances during the year has been greater in British and Canadian Companies than in American. In 1869, the excess of American over Canadian insurance for the year was nearly $8,000,000. In 1876, only $1,274,838.
