84. From the above table it will be seen that the percentage of increase in the population of cities and towns was very much larger than that of the country, being 33 percent, against 15-6 percent. If we except Manitoba, where the increase in population was abnormally large, and New Brunswick, where, as has been stated, there was a special cause for decrease in urban population, we find that British Columbia and Prince Edward Island showed the largest increase in urban, and British Columbia, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia in rural population.
