

Newfoundland.—Provincial park area in Newfoundland was increased recently from 42 sq. miles to 48 sq. miles. In addition to the 42 sq. miles on the west coast of the Province, which was set aside as Serpentine Park and is still undeveloped, six square miles on the Upper Humber River will be developed in the near future as a Provincial Park.

Quebec.—The Province of Quebec has established five Provincial Parks and four fish and game reserves. Four of the Parks areas are quite extensive in size. La Vérendrye Park, 140 miles northwest of Montreal, covers an area of 4,747 sq. miles; Laurentides Park, 25 miles north of Quebec City is 3,613 sq. miles in area; Trembling Mountain, 80 miles north of Montreal, 1,223 sq. miles; and Gaspesian Park, Gaspé Peninsula, 514 sq. miles. Mount Orford Park, situated 15 miles west of Sherbrooke, is 16 sq. miles in extent. The fish and game reserves together cover an area of more than 10,000 sq. miles. These Parks and reserves are wilderness areas of great scenic interest, for the most part mountainous country threaded with many rivers, lakes and streams and abounding in wildlife. In all of them, except Mount Orford, excellent fishing may be found and the Parks are organized to accommodate sportsmen and tourists in camps, cottages and lodges. Trembling Mountain is a famous resort area, in both summer and winter, and is easily reached by highway the year round from Montreal. The Department of Game and Fisheries administers the Parks and reserves as well as four salmon streams which are open to anglers.

Ontario.—There are six Provincial Parks in Ontario administered by the Department of Lands and Forests, all of which are Crown game preserves. Three of these Parks—Algonquin, 105 miles west of Ottawa (2,750 sq. miles), Rondeau, 70 miles east of Windsor (8 sq. miles), and Ipperwash, 50 miles north of Chatham (109 acres)—are easily reached by car and contain facilities for camping, picnicking, swimming, dancing, fishing, hiking and boating. Boys', girls' and adults' commercial camps are established in Algonquin Park. Quetico Park, in the Rainy River district of northwestern Ontario (1,720 sq. miles) and Sibley Park, on the north shore of Lake Superior (63 sq. miles), are accessible by car but are not developed. Superior Park, about 70 miles north of Sault Ste. Marie (540 sq. miles), may be reached by boat or rail and is undeveloped.

Manitoba.—Three areas in the Province may be considered as Provincial Parks, although they are not set up as such. Whiteshell Forest Reserve (1,088 sq. miles) and Cormorant Forest Reserve (580 sq. miles) are used as recreational areas. Another area known as the Northern Recreational Area (936 sq. miles) has not as yet been designated by Order in Council as either a forest reserve or a provincial park, but it also is used as a recreational area and has been included in the total of 2,604 sq. miles designated as provincial park area in Manitoba.

Saskatchewan.—Saskatchewan has ten Provincial Parks having a total area exceeding 1,000,000 acres. Cypress Hills, Duck Mountain, Greenwater Lake, Moose Mountain, Little Manitou and Valley Centre are operated as summer resorts with chalet, lodge, cabin and trailer accommodation, and camping and picnic facilities. Recreational activities include fishing, boating, swimming, golf, tennis, dancing, baseball, hiking, horseback riding, etc., and the Parks are all well fitted with playground and beach equipment for children. In Cypress Hills Park, elk, antelope, deer and beaver are plentiful and brook and other trout abound in the streams and lakes. Heavy stands of tall, straight lodgepole pine provide
