

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics Building now houses only part of the Bureau's staff, the number of employees having grown from 1,500 in the early 1950s, when the building was constructed, to more than 2,800 in 1968.

Walter E. Duffett, the present Dominion Statistician, with his immediate predecessor, Herbert Marshall, who held the post from 1945 until 1957.